

Dedicated to all of the Animals who served and died in the First World War.

If They Could Speak

If they could speak, what would they tell,
Of the part they played, in that war of hell?
Of the heavy loads borne, through mud and gore.
Drained and weary, injured and sore.

Of messages carried, flying way up high.
Over war torn landscapes, in the fire lit sky.
Searching for wounded, as the battle roar fades,
instinctively knowing, bringing comfort and aid.

And for those found, close to their death,
Laying down beside them,'til they drew their last breath.

Of the guns, the smoke, of no mans land.
The reassuring pat of a human hand.
Brave and loyal, though they had no choice.
And WE WILL REMEMBER THEM, we will be their voice.

THE LAST POST

They shall not grow old,
as we that are left grow old,
Age shall not weary them,
nor the years condemn.
At the going down of the sun,
and in the morning,
we will remember them.
